

Please join us for the AGM of the Labour History Society

The brief meeting will be followed by a presentation by guest speaker, Dr Paul Chapman, titled

CAN WEATHERILL PLAY PLAYFORD?

History tells us South Australian economic development requires a formidable, aggressive government with a strategy for transforming the State. Governor Gawler was our first, Sir Thomas Playford our best at leading such a government. This talk summarises what it takes to play Playford and asks if Mr Weatherill can replicate the success? It looks at spending and debt, labour regulation and industry assistance.

Paul is currently Executive Research Director of the Adelaide Alumni Research Network and Adjunct Lecturer at Carnegie Mellon University. He has worked within government, as an academic and writer concerned with public policy in South Australia for more than 30 years. His current areas of interest include development economics, regulation of the network industries and regional economies.
